

GILLIAN FITCH

Gillian Fitch learnt piano, clarinet and guitar from a young age at City of Belfast School of Music. She first performed on the recorder in the Ulster Hall aged 9.

She was given an alto saxophone for her 40th birthday and after practising very hard achieved grade 8 in 2013. She has been teaching at ATCMS since October 2013 and enjoys teaching mature students as she finds them keen to learn a new skill and socialise with fellow players.

Gillian sings and plays saxophone regularly as part of a worship team in church. Her big musical ambition is to join a jazz or swing band- regularly mentioning this to her pupils in the hope that they will start one together!

Like most sax players Gillian's aim was to play Baker Street by Gerry Rafferty. Her favourite musician is Sting though these days Elbow and George Ezra is top on her playlist.

If she could have one desert island track it would be Unfinished Sympathy by Massive Attack.

Gillian is trained in child protection and also tutors music privately.
